HONGKONG, APRIL 3, 1865.

THERE is a telegram in town as late as the 9th March, but we cannot learn any more about its contents, than the reference to five firms whose drafts had been protested.

We have seen a telegram to the 9th March. The Bank rate was 5 per cent. Cotton was not nearly so low nor so dull was previously represented. Not a word was said about the fall of Charleston, which is singular seeing that the telegram in question is the first via Persia the party to whom it was addressed has received.

Our readers will observe that Mr. and Mrs. Simonsen make their first appearance this evening at the Theatre Royal, for the benefit of the Misses Aldrich. The Programme is in every way most attractive and will certainly draw a full house. Our readers had better make early application to Mr. Silveira for tickets, as the box plan was pretty well scored last evening.

The following is a critique on Simonsen's performance taken from a Hongkong paper on the occasion of his last visit here:—

"Martin Simonsen gave his last Concert on Saturday evening. As on the former occasions, the entertainment passed off to his extreme satisfaction of every one present. In purity of sound, bowing, execution and pathos, M. Simonsen, indeed, stands unrivalled—he is a wonderful performer—no doubt, indeed, if he has his equal in the world. On the present occasion he played two pieces of his own composition, one of Vieuxtemp's, and one of De Beriot's, all in most finished style. First on the programme was his Fantasia Bravura, entitled Souvenirs of Jenny Lind on Thames, from Norma. This piece was much applauded; whilst the second piece, the Fantasie Caprice by Vieuxtemp's, both astonished and delighted those who can appreciate the higher school of violin playing. It is a most difficult piece, and the manner in which it was played by M. Simonsen, gave a striking illustration of the deep study of classical music in which the gifted gentleman must have indulged. The third solo was De Beriot's Air Varies, in which he was equally successful.

The "Bird on the Tree," the fourth, was an exquisite piece of harmony, and elicited a hearty encore. In this piece the room seemed filled with canaries and nightingales, warbling away, if we may so express it, in a furor. To such strain a we could have listened with delight for hours.

THE Gazette of Saturday contains the following in addition to the proceedings of the Legislative Council.

The Colonial Surgeon's report for 1864, which extends over no less than sixteen pages, and which is so prolix, verbose, and voluminous, as to render its perusal a task which we feel assured there is no one living, takes sufficient interest in the colony as to induce him to undertake. Some restraint should be put upon the Colonial Surgeon's crocodilus scribendi. The labor of preparing such a report as this before us must be very great, and we have no hesitation in recording our conviction that his valuable time might be more profitably employed, to say nothing of the sad waste of labor and money in preparing the report for publication.

But in addition to these considerations, we feel compelled to confess that we have no confidence in the report before us. The peculiar limping style of the diction, the manner in which the couleur de rose is daubed on, the statistical gyrations indulged in, the scientific convolutions which are relied on for the production of facts that the report was written for a purpose and has a tendency specially adapted to afford satisfaction to some body. It was of course gratifying to Governor Robinson to be enabled to say at the dinner given to him at the Club, that the sanatory state of the Colony was highly favorable; and if we remember aright, His Excellency did refer to this very Report of the Colonial Surgeon which we are now reviewing, in his speech on that occasion—so that Sir Hercules must have either seen the document, or have known its contents a full month before its publication.

Strange things do happen, but surely the strangest of all must be the circumstance of the sanatory condition of a Colony being regulated by the mutual relations existing between the Governor thereof and the Colonial Surgeon. Dr Murray's first two annual reports were deemed by Governor R. as unfit for publication, and the consequence was they were "Mercered." (suppressio veri is the legitimate term but it has become stale and funny). This occurred about the time of the discovery of the necessity of raising the salaries of the heads of departments, by reason of the advanced rates of show, show, and the increase of revenue. The effect produced did not extend below such heads of departments as had a voice in voting for the advance, and as the Colonial Surgeon lacked such privilege and appeared to be so low a fellow as to be unable to see things as they ought to be and not as they were, his salary was docked by jingo instead of being raised.

Not content with that, the poor man was "Alexandered," which means bullied, and ultimately, he became such a fine noble fellow, as to evince some little anxiety as to obtaining cognizance of what might be acceptable to Sir Robinson, or of anything were wanting which he could run for to fetch for to bring &c. To such a pitch of perfection did this oppressed son of Galen arrive that instead of "Mercering" the report of last year, His Excellency proclaimed it, exultingly, egotistically, and preparadially, about one month before its publication.

If Dr. Murray's object were to have his docked salary raised, we must say that the latter bestowed on this report, and its wonderful drift and one sidedness, go some way to earn it. But we do object on principle to the valuable time of the Colonial Surgeon being wasted on such arrant slap trap. An intelligible report would be valuable—such a report as this before us, is a mass of rubbish.

The next item of information is contained in a notification from Mr. Alexander, stating that he himself has been appointed by the Acting Governor to be a Provisional member of the Legislative and Executive Councils.

The next notification runs to the effect that Lieut. Lyster R.E. has been appointed resident civil engineer at Kowloon, vice Lieut. Williams R.E. resigned.

Then we have a notification translated from the Chinese Gazette to the effect that every Chinaman found in the street without a light and a pass, between 8 P. M., till morning gunfire will be taken into custody. The reader will please observe the word will; may would have been better, with the proviso added, "in case the police should be visible, and should refuse to be bribed." However it is some consolation to see that our authorities are on the qui vive, for really life is hardly safe.

The next is a Notification stating that Mr. Masson will perform his own duties of deputy Registrar as well as those of Registrar, vice Alexander provisionally exalted.

Then follows a Notification that Mr. Smale, the Attorney General, having been granted twelve months leave, Mr. Ball will fill the post of Attorney General. Furthermore, Mr. Whyte, the stipendiary Magistrate will continue his own duties and will be vested besides with those of Judge of the Court of Summary Jurisdiction.

Now we are averse on principle to say anything disrespectful of a Judge, but Mr. Ball being at present off the Bench we have a question to ask him which we have for a long time desired a solution of. When he was Acting Chief Justice, he ruled that a thief who had entered a house by the way of a China kitchen chimney did not commit burglary because the aperture was sufficiently large to admit the rascal without giving rise to the necessity of resorting to violence. Very good—suppose ingress through the Chimney in question had been obstructed by means of iron bars, as is often the case. Suppose two burglars—we mean thieves, entered the premises—one a stout rascal—the other a thin ruffian—the latter slides through the apertures of the iron bars without violence; the other has to remove the bar to obtain admittance. That is our case. Mr. Ball—does the thin villain escape the charge of burglary, because of his slimness, and the fat one become involved in the meshes of the law by reason of a constitutional calamity or an abdominal protuberance?

The next Notification states that Mr. Power the first clerk in the Surveyor General's office has obtained twelve months leave of absence, that Mr. Clagas the second clerk is to be 1st clerk, and that Mr. Gorrard, the first clerk in the Registrar General's office, is to be the Marriage Registrar.

PARIS, 16th February, 1865.

L'Empire, c'est la paix; such is theme of the discourse pronounced by the Emperor the 15th of February, at the opening of the session of the Corps Legislatif. The present harangue is but a paraphrase of the speech of Bordeaux, which nine days after this pacific declaration, was broke out, and the remembrance of this diminishes the hopes which his present words would give rise to.

However the situation as painted by Napoleon he is satisfactive; all our expeditions are coming to an end; our army has graduated China; the Navy of China, our army in Africa will be reduced; that of Mexico, already returns to France; the garrison of Rome will soon come back; and in closing the temple of war we shall be able with pride to inscribe on its new triumphal arch, these words; to the glory of the French armies, for victories gained in Europe, in Asia, in African and in America. But in this there is more imagination than reality, with some few exceptions, the whole of the expeditionary corps remains in Mexico; and the last news tell us that Bazaine has taken the command in chief of the expedition directed against Porfirio Diaz and the Juarist army. Not a battalion has quitted Rome; we cannot therefore say, belongs to no one.

The blue and the rose dominate in the Imperial speech; the Emperor speaks of the Dano-German conflict as terminated, when nothing is concluded, when a tempest may arise in Germany; we deceive ourselves if we regard the Italian question as resolved, and the passage relative to the convention of the 15th September in spite of the applause which greeted in the Chamber has not converted one. The convention, says the Emperor, consecrates two great principles; the definitive establishment of the new Kingdom of Italy, and the independence of the Holy see; the provisional and precarious state which existed so much alarm in Europe is about to disappear. It is no longer the scattered members of the Italian country seeking to attach themselves by weak ligatures to a little state situated at the foot of the Alps; it is a great country which raising itself above local prejudices and mistrusting the excitement of the moment transports its capital boldly into the heart of the Peninsula into an impregnable fortress. By this means as into an impregnable fortress. By this means as into an impregnable fortress. By this means as

NOTICE OF REDUCTION OF PASSAGE MONEY.

IN the year 1857 the Directors made a considerable reduction in the Company's rates of Passage Money, which continued in force till 1861. In that year, owing to the extraordinary rise in the Cost and Freight of Coals, and the enhanced price of all descriptions of Naval Stores, the Directors were reluctantly compelled to return to the rates of Passage Money previously in force. They are now happy to state that a decrease in the price of Coal and other expenses of Steam Navigation, enables them to reduce the Company's Tariff to the undernoted scale, which will take effect from and after the 1st June next, viz:—

Extracts.

We call the following from our London files received per Aphee:—

The correspondence on the St. Alban's and Lake Erie outrages has been laid before Parliament. It is, on the whole, very temperate and conciliatory on both sides,—the only monstrous suggestion made by the North, and that not as a claim, but only as a means of avoiding these disputes, being that England should refuse the right of asylum to the "active enemies" of the United States. Of course Lord Russell merely declined to listen to such amiable suggestion for our good. For the rest, there does not appear to have been as yet any violation of the arrangement of 1817, which limits the forces to be employed by each country on the border lakes,—and though notice was given in October to terminate it in six months, it was accompanied by the cordial assurances from Mr. Adams that as soon as the war was ended the Government of the United States would wish to return to the old arrangement. Mr. Seward has seldom shown so much temper as in this correspondence.—Spectator.

The correspondent of the Times at Richmond writes on the 27th of December, between the two attacks on Wilmington,—after the failure and before the success,—a letter in which he speaks of the loss of Wilmington as almost a blessing in disguise,"—because it would extinguish a sink of corruption. He asks, however, whether in the existing decline of Confederate virtue" the Confederacies can stand the discouragement caused by the loss of the blockade-running port. The Richmond papers are no less gloomy. Some of them talk of applying a "Pride's purge" to the Congress, some speak of the shocking morale of the Confederate troops, one says that out of 150,000 conscripts the army actually got only 13,000, and that the rest are marauding about the country, and almost all are bitter to the verge of madness against the Confederate administration. Ibid.

Reports have been current all the week of a cession of Mexican territory to France. The provinces of Sonora and Chihuahua in particular are said to have been ceded in return for the great services rendered by France to Mexico. The Moniteur emphatically denies these reports, and it is prima facie improbable that the Emperor should for the sake of such a possession bring on himself a war with the United States. The most probable explanation of the story is that certain mines have been mortgaged to France, as properties, not territory, in security for the debt owing by Mexico to the Empire, and that the transaction has been seized on by persons who in the South desire to excite ill-will between France and the Union. Ibid.

The issue of the conflict in Prussia is still uncertain. The King, it is said, is so irritated by the demeanour of Austria that he is half disposed to compromise with his Parliament, and has invited Herr Grabow to Court. Herr Grabow went, and was courteously received, but accepted a few days after a civic crown offered him by the city of Cologne for his firm resistance to the King's Government. On the other hand, according to the latest telegrams, the King has resolved to adhere to his military programme, and the Chamber is equally resolved not to accept it, and reconciliation is therefore regarded as "impossible." All this while Herr von Bismark is promising to ask for nine millions sterling wherewith to build a fleet, a sum which he certainly cannot get without the Chamber. He probably trusts to the desire of all Northern Germany for a navy to coerce the Chamber,—but that desire may operate in another way. The Chamber may refuse the grant, and the discredit of delaying the navy attach to the Government instead of to the Chambers. When the Peers in 1789 proposed to cheapen bread, the Times Man simply replied that the dearness lay with the Peers, who would not cheapen it by yielding to the will of the Commons.—Ibid.

The Colonial Office has given way on the question of pensions to ex-governors of colonies. Mr. Cardwell announced on Thursday that the Government was prepared to bring in a bill on the subject, and we trust it will be a liberal one. No economy can be more infamous than that which prefers inferior men to these governorships because able men cost money. The governors are rapidly becoming ambassadors, and must be taught that fitting representation is for them a duty as well as thrift.—Ibid.

The Confederate Ironclads.

The Index contains the following details respecting the new cruiser:—"The Confederate ironclad ship, about which so many mysterious paragraphs have gone the round of the English and foreign journals, is the Stonewall, commanded by Capt. Page, C. S. N. She is one of the two formidable vessels built by Mr. Arman, of Bordeaux, and constituted with her consort the subject of a correspondence, with which our readers are probably familiar, between the French Government and the late Mr. Dayton. The Stonewall is vessel of great power, heavily armed, and fully manned. Her crew is principally composed of the men who served under Capt. Wardell in the Confederate war-steamer Florida.

Mr. Gladstone's Definition of "Deputation."

"A mouth of mulitit do which signifies many but does not signify much."—(Owl.)

The Emperor Napoleon III. recently had a quiet evening with a few friends. In the course of conversation, he remarked that it was very hard to define a savant. "I don't think so," retorted M. Drhuys de Lhuys, "I would propose this definition: A savant is man who knows all that all the world doesn't know, and who doesn't know what all the world knows."—Ibid.

A very capital pun (writes our Paris correspondent) appears in a German satirical paper. The Interlocutors are two burgesses in Munich. The first ejaculates:— "You know the news, Cæsar est sous presse?" "You don't mean it," retorts the other, "I thought la presse was sous Cæsar."—(Herald.)

The Davenport Brothers at Liverpool.

The performances of the Davenports at St. George's-hall, came to an abrupt termination on Wednesday. On Tuesday night two gentlemen—Holley and Cummins—were selected by the audience to step upon the stage and bind the performers. The process of binding was proceeding when one of the Davenports objected to the tightness of the rope and declined to go on with the performance. A disturbance ensued, and the performance came to an end. Many persons obtained their money back. On Wednesday a large audience was present, Dr. Ferguson opened the proceedings by reading three conditions, by which the Davenports reserved to themselves the right of rejecting any particular gentleman in whom they might discover a disposition to deal unfairly. During his address the greatest uproar prevailed. Messrs. Hulley and Cummins were again selected by the audience, and on mounting the stage Mr Ferguson announced that the Brothers objected to these two gentlemen on account of the brutal manner in which they had previously bound them. The uproar continued, the audience insisting on the performance proceeding. After very considerable delay the Davenports presented themselves, and the binding process commenced. One of them, however, immediately protested against the tightness of the cord, and was immediately released by Dr. Ferguson, both of them loudly expressing their indignation, and Davenport shewing his bleeding wrist. The audience, however, and those on the stage asserted that Ferguson intentionally inflicted the injury while removing the cord. The Davenports then retired, which was the signal for the audience to take possession of the stage. Dr. Ferguson was hustled, the cabinet upset, jumped upon, and utterly demolished; fragments of it were strongly contested for, and even, indeed, sold at a shilling a piece; the ropes were cut up and divided, and the musical instruments, trumpets, and bells disappeared in the general scramble.—Times.

The war in America.

Our correspondent writes from New York, Jan. 31 Two of the ablest and most prominent public men of the North have lately expressed their opinion on the state of affairs—the one privately and confidentially, but in words that have been promulgated far and near by the press, the other openly, before an audience of 5,000 of his fellow-citizens. The first was General Sherman; the second, General Butler. The one has the genius of silence, the other the talent of oratory. When either speaks America is glad to listen. In the one case it expects to hear wisdom, and in the other to be made acquainted with principles, if not with secrets. In neither instance has it been disappointed. General Sherman thoroughly understands his countrymen. Undazzled by his present enormous popularity, he estimates their favour at its true value. He also understands the South, and for that reason is not led away by the sanguine hopes of a restoration of the Union which have driven all classes of the Northern people wellnigh wild with exultation. In a confidential discourse with a correspondent of the World at Savannah, and published at full length in that journal of yesterday, though, doubtless, without the General's permission, he stated his opinion on the subject of "popularity." "As to to the popularity you speak of," said he, "I know very well of what stuff it is made. I am popular as long as I am successful. Not only the American press, but the London papers call me the great General of the age. Why? Because I have crossed a great extent of country, and by a long and perilous march have caused an important city to fall into our hands. All this is very well. But, suppose, in the campaign I am about to undertake, I meet the combined force of Lee, Beauregard, and Hardee, and fail; what would be my fate then? Why, every laurel I have won, everything I have done, would be forgotten. There would not be a tree high enough to hang me upon. I should be dragged down from the pillar of fame to rot in obscurity in some remote corner of the West; and the great general would be a failure, an impostor." The incidental revelation herein contained is as instructive as the philosophy of the whole passage. Possibly, and he knows that his words were to be flashed through the country over the telegraphic wires, the General would have been more reticent, and possibly, too, if the same correspondent should again treat himself within the lines, he may receive a different reception. Being asked if he did not think the war was nearly at an end, the General replied "At an end! The war at an end so far from being at an end, the war is only about to begin. The policy of giving up their river and coast cities, although taking away some of the prestige of the Confederacy, is making it materially stronger than if it retained them in its possession, while the opening of the same cities to trade by the Federal Government is efficiently supplying the rebels with all the goods they used to receive by blockade-runners, at a cheaper price and with less risk and inconvenience to themselves. As the opinion thus expressed by Gen. Sherman happens to be the opinion of Gen. Lee, the world need not be much astonished to hear at no distant day that Charleston and Wilmington have shared the fate of Savannah, that the war of Southern independence has entered its second period, and that greater events than any which have preceded it will signalise the progress of the opening campaign.

Gen. Butler's speech to his fellow-citizens at Lowell was of a different character, though scarcely less important than the unsolicited admissions of Gen. Sherman. It was not only a laboured vindication of his own military career, but a studied denunciation of General Grant. Having disdainfully brushed away the accusation brought against him by the co-operating Admiral at Fort Fisher and spoken of them as "the froth which is always the accompaniment of too lively porter," he proceeded in a manner not to be mistaken plainly previous inuendo that General Grant was criminally wasteful of human life. He accepted the deprecatory epithet of the "hero of Big Bethel and Fort Fisher," which his enemies had launched at him. "I am content—nay, I claim," he said "to be the hero of the comparatively bloodless attack on Big Bethel, and of the wholly bloodless failure of Fort Fisher. But I do not admit to be the hero of Fredericksburg, of Chancellorsville, of the Chickahominy, of the Wilderness, of Coal of the Chickahominy, of the Wilderness, of Coal Harbour nor of that charnel house of useless dead in the mine before Petersburg." Returning to the subject, he said, The explosion at the Dutch Gap Canal did not, perhaps, make so large a hole as the explosion of the mine of Petersburg, but it was not filled like that with American dead until it ran blood." Nor was the charge of cruelty and unnecessary waste of the lives of his soldiers the only one he broach against his superior. He expressly accused him of thwarting all efforts for the exchange of prisoner between North and South; and of purposely and unfairly leading the Confederate Commissioner astray upon the subject, and of consequently causing the death in Southern prisons of many thousands of Federal soldiers. It is difficult to see how General Grant can permit such assertions to be made without demanding a court-martial either upon himself or upon his assailant, or how Mr. Lincoln can suffer a Major-General to remain in the service who utters words so obviously calculated to create disaffection, if not to stir up a mutiny, in the very presence of the enemy. General Butler, though bitter against Grant and contempts as against Porter, was careful to breathe no word of disparagement against his master. Disbelieving in any peace with the South that was not conquered by the sword, he urged his auditors to sustain the Government with all their energies, and to put their utmost confidence in the President, a man who was like "honest, patriotic, and capable." He had no faith in the re-enlistment of the Federal armies by means of large bounties, for large bounties had ultimately to be paid by the people, and, besides being a heavy burden upon the poor, had the fatal disadvantage of not procuring the services of the best men. Neither did the General seem to be in favour of a forced conscription. His method was like himself, clear and precise—neither more nor less than an offer to every volunteer of a certain portion of Southern soil, which he proposed to divide among the conquerors, as William the Norman divided among his captain and followers the acres of the Saxon people of England. It is likely that the General's method, if adopted would be popular, and that the scramble for Southern plantations would not be an exclusively left to Irishmen and Germans as the scramble for bounty money, but would be shared by a rush of New Englanders and Down Easters, glad to exchange the hard rock and bleak skies of their own bitter corner of the Union for the fertile lands and balmy skies of the South. Federal Butler sees as far before him as the acutest Yankee of them all, and his plans and opinions may prove to be pioneers, and prepare a way in which the public will be apt to follow.—Times.

Embarkation of Troops to Amoy.

The Steamer Gerard arrived yesterday, brought dates from Shanghai to the 28th Ulto. We call the following:

Trade day has been appointed for the embarkation of the Chinese troops destined to operate against the Rebels in the Fukien provinces. A considerable time will no doubt be consumed in completing the embarkation, but it is expected that by the middle of the week the troops outside the South gate will be wholly broken up. The following vessels had been chartered:—the steamers Dumbarton, Sheng-hai, Viola, Chusan, Chentielee, and Annette, at the rate of $4 per head for the soldiers, and $10 for officers, and the Petunia, at the rate of $4,500 in full, for the transport of provisions, powder, &c. The barque Malacca has also been taken up for the horses. Colonel Kirkham accompanies the head quarters as military adviser, and will, it is to be hoped, organise a disciplined contingent before the campaign in Fukien is opened. Indeed without foreign assistance the Imperialists will have no chance of making head against the efficient troops which the rebels now possess, and which under the active superintendence of efficient foreign officers are every day becoming more perfect in European drill. The Chinese steamer Confucius is, we understand, to be detached for service on the coast of Fukien.—N. C. Daily News, 27 March.

New Zealand.

Up the river all is quiet, and likely to remain so, but at the Waitara there seems to be some preparation for resistance. Waireroa pa, on this side of the river, has been made smaller and strengthened. There are said to be eighty Waikatos in it, headed by Tatito Warre.

On Thursday, fresh reinforcements arrived of seventeen officers and 400 rank and file of the 50th Regiment, and officers and twenty men of the Royal Artillery, with two six-pounder Armstrong guns.

The expeditionary force of the 60th and 18th Regiments, and about 700 of the 57th, will proceed northwards, under the command of Colonel Waddy.

Governor Grey disembarked from the Esk, in consequence of the threatening state of native affairs; and instead of going to Dunedin, despatched the steamer to Tauranga for intelligence respecting the reported outbreak there. On her arrival, it was found that Mr. Clarke, of the native Department, and some friendly chiefs, had induced the East Coast natives to return to their settlements, and affairs there now look quite settled.—Australasian.
